Expert Active

Cell turnover slows dramatically as we age, from approximately 20 days in younger and middle-aged adults up to over 30 days on older adults. As this happens, it affects the skin's appearance and texture in a variety of ways. From fine lines and wrinkles to acne and hyperpigmentation, chemical peels are one of the most effective ways to address these changes. But they're not one size fits all treatment for optimal results, a peel should be strong enough to accelerate cell turn over but not so powerful as to induce severe skin inflammation.

Chemical peels:

An overview

Peels are classified into four categories, based on penetration depth and their effect on the skin:

Very superficial peels

Used to treat acne, hyperpigmentation and signs of ageing, these peels affect the Stratum Corneum and don't penetrate beyond the granular level (Stratum Granulosum)

Superficial peels

These peels are used to exfoliate skin in the epidermal layer down to the Basal layer (or Stratum Germinativum). They treat signs of ageing, acne and hyperpigmentation.

Medium-depth peels

Typically performed by a medical professional, these peels reach the upper layers of the dermis down to the papillary dermis. They treat superficial scars and solar keratoses as well as hyperpigmentation and signs of ageing.

Deep peels

Performed only by medical professionals, deep peels remove the papillary dermis and reach the reticular dermis to address severe photoaging deep wrinkles and scars.

Introducing the Pro Power Peel

When it comes to chemical peels, we've always had a unique perspective. Promoting overall skin health is one of Dermalogica's core values. Dermalogica also believe that regular resurfacing is crucial to accelerate cell turnover and renewal rates- so Dermalogica opts for peels that are more frequent and less invasive rather than those that push the skin to the point of severe inflammation and possible scarring.

Additionally, Dermalogica are constantly looking for ways to give the flexibility to create completely customised treatments for a range of skin conditions. With this in mind, the skin health experts at The International Dermal Institute and Dermalogica are excited to introduce the all-new and fully customisable Pro Power Peel.

Bt-Therapeutic

The bt-analyze uses advanced technology to calculate the moisture content of the skin not oil and gives accurate results.

This bt-micro is a hand-held professional technology. This type of technology allows larger product molecules to be absorbed more readily and deeper into the skin. Penetration increases could measure 50-70%. This aids in deep cleansing and ultrasonic exfoliation leaving skin smooth, fresh and perfectly

This treatment is a non-surgical face lift, eye rejuvenation, acne therapy and anti-aging treatments are just some of the fantastic modes that can be used to evolve your regular skin treatments.

All this explains why forward-thinking companies such as Dermalogica trust BT Therapeutics technology, as it massively enhances the value and effectiveness of their products.
